As the lights come up to reveal the ballet's audience, Vicky is spotlighted. She enters onto the stage, overwhelmed by what she has seen as the dancers' spin around her.

LADY NESTON'S HOUSE, AFTER THE SHOW

At a party hosted by Lady Neston after the show, her niece, Victoria performs for the guests. Julian Craster refuses to play the music Victoria chose for her dance and she must instead improvise to his music.

Lady Neston's guests admire Vicky's dance, but Boris Lermontov is more impressed by Julian's music. He hands Julian a business card, appearing to offer him a job.

Irina is in Covent Garden. She holds a white ballet tutu, and dances with it on stage. She is joined by Ivan, who then takes the spotlight.

SCENE THREE

COVENT GARDEN, BACKSTAGE

Grischa is leading the dancers in a class, with Julian playing the piano. Vicky and Joyce, another auditionee for the company, join the class as a part of their audition. Lermontov watches them, selecting Vicky to join the ballet company.

SCENE SEVEN

THEATRE IN MONTE CARLO

The whole company is rehearsing for The Red Shoes, including Irina who is now on crutches due to her injury. Vicky's nerves are comforted by Lermontov, whilst being handed a costume by Edith.

The red curtains are drawn as everyone leaves, apart from Julian. As the title 'The Red Shoes' is projected behind him, he begins to conduct the orchestra.

The Girl (Vicky) and The Boy (Ivan) travel from the suburbs to the city. Suddenly, a sinister Pimp (Grischa) appears. Intrigued by her beauty, he lures The Girl away with the promise of fame and fortune, enticing her with a pair of red shoes.

The Pimp seemingly hypnotises The Girl until the power of the red shoes overwhelms her. The shoes drag her around independently, forcing her to stop without a break. She journeys to a vibrant, busy dance hall, through a wild forest before getting lost in a storm.

The Girl arrives at her own funeral and sees The Boy who has become a priest. He “senses” her presence around him as she desperately reaches for him. Eventually, The Boy releases her from the shoes and she collapses and dies.

 SOUND WARNING: The dramatic piano music intensifies towards the end of the scene.

LONDON BACKSTAGE

When Julian is asleep in bed, Vicky decides to return to the Ballet Lermontov company and leaves with her ballet shoes and suitcase in hand.

THE STORY

SCENE SIX

LERMONTOV'S APARTMENT

Vicky turns up at Lermontov's apartment to beg for her job back. Vicky is dressed for The Red Shoes ballet as the scene changes around her.

 SOUND WARNING: Intense music towards the end of this scene.

 TRIGGER WARNING: Towards the end of this scene, Lermontov depicts tying the red shoes around his neck for around 2 seconds.

SCENE SEVEN

NIGHTMARE IN MONTE CARLO

The ballet and real life all begin to blur, and Vicky is haunted by the faces of Julian, Lermontov and The Pimp. The sound of an audience chanting for her builds up and begins to sound like an approaching steam train. The noise gets louder and louder, as Vicky slowly advances towards the curtains. The curtain parts and we see the intensely bright lights of the steam train charging toward Vicky, resulting in catastrophe.

Vicky's body is surrounded by onlookers and Julian arrives from London, just in time to see Vicky take her final breath. Julian removes her red shoes, and Vicky dies in his arms, mirroring the final scene of The Red Shoes ballet. Lermontov picks up the pair of shoes, walks towards the audience and holds them up, once more in their spotlight.

THE END

When the show ends, there will be loud clapping and cheering.

People may stand up as the performers take a bow.

When you leave the theatre, you might want to talk about what you've just seen or take some time to quietly think about it on your own. The story might mean something different to you than it does to other people.
